

WHAT, AFTER ALL, IS COLOR

without the cunning of the hand that paints?

What, after all, is Fabric, without the skill of the hands that fashion it into shape?

As it has taken one of England's famous painters forty years to get the natural coloring of the plum from the chaos of color, so it has taken (us) years and years of persistent study and effort to portray the Fashion scene as we exhibit it today.

Upon the Fall landscape, rich, deep grays, in diagonals and stripes—plain or with a bit of color; homespun with little daubs of black or brown here and there, or sprinkled with golden threads; blues—some with a suggestion of red or gold; Scotch mixtures of green, red and brown.

Nowhere is variety so apparent, both in domestic and imported fabrics.

Nowhere is distinctive tailoring so merged with individuality of fabric on the Palette of Style—the composite result can only be a creation of a master's hand.

OPIUM QUESTION IN THE FAR EAST

London, Sept. 19.—Just before leaving London for China, Lieutenant General L. Chang issued the following summary of the opium dispute between China and our home government:

(1) "In China our opium prohibition is not yet totally done, but the government is always doing its best to suppress this evil."

(2) "We have reduced our native production by 80 or 90 per cent, but we need to continue our own work, which the British government declares it would like to assist us to accomplish."

(3) "China's difficulties in carrying out this reform are greatly increased by England's policy in forcing Indian opium upon us, and the present stocks at our treaty ports will, if allowed to remain there, create countless troubles between the Chinese officials and the English merchants."

(4) "Opium prohibition in China is being enforced more strictly every day, and though the merchants who hold the present stocks will be and by complain as their opium becomes unsaleable, China must still continue to suppress without any hesitation the evil of opium smoking."

(5) "The removal of the stocks is the best way to avoid unfortunate incidents, and would be the best proof that the British government is really willing to help China in this reform."

CONVICT EXONERATES

Manti, Sept. 18.—The trial of Edward Dunn and George Davis on the charge of blowing open the vault door of the county clerk's office in this court house on the night of April 14, has been progressing here since Monday. The state rested its case at noon yesterday and the defense has nearly completed its case.

The principal witness for the defense is Frank Clayton, a man about 44 years of age, now serving a twelve year sentence in the state penitentiary for this crime to which he pleaded guilty some time ago. He spent nearly all yesterday afternoon on the witness stand, telling the story of how he and another man named Williams blew open the vault door of the clerk's office and that neither George Davis nor E. Dunn were in any way connected with the deed. Those who heard Clayton's testimony in every detail as to how he did this aver that he evidently is a master mechanic at the safe-blowing business.

Frank Clayton, George Davis and Ed Dunn were arrested by Night Watchman Jones of Spanish Fork on the night of April 19 last and later brought here.

When in jail here they improvised tools with which they drilled and sawed the iron fastenings of the jail door and escaped.

They were recaptured at Leamington, Millard county, and brought back. Clayton then pleaded guilty and was sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment.

Two unsuccessful attempts to escape were made by the remaining two. The case has attracted considerable attention here.

M'PHEARSON WANTED; MONEY AWAITS HIM

Salt Lake, Sept. 19.—Because of a telegram received from Richmond, Va., telling of the illness of his mother, W. T. McPhearson, 30 years of age is being searched for by the Salt Lake police.

McPhearson appeared at police headquarters a fortnight ago and prevailed upon Captain Emil V. Johnson to send a telegram for him to S. W. Travers of Richmond, asking for money. A check came in response to the telegram, but McPhearson never called for it.

Travers was notified. Yesterday he telegraphed the information that the young man's mother is seriously ill from worrying over the welfare of her son. McPhearson is described as being about five feet ten inches in height, weighing 170, dark complexioned and having brown curly hair and brown eyes.

NEW DISEASE IN THE BEET FIELDS OF THIS STATE

The Logan Journal says:

Some time ago a new disease made its appearance in the beet fields of this county, and experts were secured to examine the fields affected and determine what it was. At first it was thought to be a condition due to too much water being upon the beets in warm weather, but when the scientists had concluded their investigations, they announced that it was a disease that had probably been imported from Germany or Austria, with the seed. Dr. C. N. Jensen of the B. Y. college is one of the scientists who investigated the disease and has this to say of it:

In certain beet districts in Utah, the past season, a rather serious malady of the beets has made its appearance. While the disease is localized at present, it is of such a nature as to demand immediate attention. The disease is known in Europe as the heart rot and blight of beets. It is one of the most serious diseases of beets in a portion of Germany, Austria and France. The disease does not usually begin to manifest itself until August when a number of the heart leaves and outer leaves become spotted and many of them turn entirely black, the disease descends into the heart of the beet where rot ensues. At times it becomes so serious that all the leaves may die and nothing but the root of the beet remains by harvest. Providing the disease originates earlier in the season much more injury may be done. In cases where the beets are grown for seed it may attack the seed stock and seed balls. Severe damage also results from its attack on the seedling beet which is often killed at a height of not more than eight inches.

The cause of the disease is a fungus known as phoma betae. This organism, as far as we know at present, lives on the diseased foliage and beets during the winter and, if conditions are favorable, the following year, a new outbreak of the disease may occur. There has recently been much work done in Germany on this disease and it is quite definitely known at present that the seed balls help to carry the disease from year to year and, undoubtedly, the reason for the outbreak this year is due to a recent importation of seed balls from Germany. This is a matter which requires the closest attention.

It is supposed that this disease was the chief agent in the production of great losses in the beet fields of Europe in the middle and latter part of the 19th century, and it is advisable that every precaution be taken to eliminate this disease this year in Utah, or we may have serious trouble in the future. As far as we know, this is the first instance of the introduction of this disease in the United States.

All the tops and any other portion of the previous crop, in fields infested, should be destroyed. At the present time spraying for this disease has not given complete satisfaction. It is also advisable that all seeds planted should receive proper treatment. There has been considerable work done on the treatment of seed and some have obtained excellent results by treating with Bordeaux mixture while others have used a dilute solution of sulphuric acid. The German literature dealing with seed treatment is not at our disposal and the exact strengths cannot at present be given.

CHRIS JORDAN LEAVES ON WRESTLING TOUR

Chris Jordan, world's champion middleweight wrestler, and his manager, Tom Scanlon, will leave this morning for Price, where, on Saturday night, Jordan will wrestle Louis Sargakis. On Monday night Jordan will meet Charles DuCray, the Colorado wrestler, in a return match at Grand Junction.

"We will return from Grand Junction Tuesday night," said Scanlon last night, "and then we propose to stop up the arrangements for a return match with Yokel. We want this match not later than October 15, and do not care who promotes it. The middle of October will give everybody three weeks to get ready for the match."

SHORTHAND

We don't teach the Gregg. Why? Because from its history in Utah, as given to us by the best of authority, it has been tried from 1890 to 1913 in the following schools and discarded viz: The A. C. and the B. Y. C. of Logan; The Weber academy and the O. H. S. of Ogden; the L. D. S. Business college and the Salt Lake High school; and the Snow Academy of Ephraim. Also the Salt Lake Business college and the Ogden Business, now defunct, taught the Gregg.

No. The Smithsonian does not teach the Gregg. It can't afford to.

POLICE AFTER PROBING AN ALLEGED FRAUD

Salt Lake, Sept. 19.—Police investigation of an alleged fraud by means of which many prominent citizens are said to have been imposed upon, led to the arrest of Mrs. L. M. Hamilton and her 18-year-old daughter, Helen Hamilton, yesterday afternoon, and of O. W. Fowler, who says he is Mrs. Hamilton's husband, shortly before midnight last night.

According to the police, the mother and daughter have been visiting homes and business offices in the city, selling chances on a diamond ring. They presented certificates of genuineness of the diamond, signed by two Salt Lake jewelers.

A prominent attorney, who happened to be at police headquarters last night when the investigation was in progress, admitted that he had been talked into taking a chance on the ring. He went further and said that many of his fellow attorneys had tossed small change into the lap of the fickle goddess, at the request of the young woman, who showed the names of prominent citizens who had bought numbers.

The diamond secured at the time of the arrest of the mother and daughter is said by the police to be an imitation. It is believed that a genuine stone was used to secure the certificates from the jewelers.

The mother and daughter were arrested at the family residence, 668 South West Temple street, by Detective W. C. Zeese and Herbert Leichter. Fowler was later found at the Western Union Telegraph office. He was awaiting an answer from his wife, sent by a messenger.

The messenger was received by two detectives, who telephoned to headquarters, and Detective George Chase and Patrolman F. W. Crow went immediately to the telegraph office and arrested Fowler.

The family includes two boys, about 9 and 12 years of age. They sat in the captain's office last night while their mother was trying to explain away the suspicion in the mind of Chief of Police B. F. Grant.

According to the police, the family came here recently from Butte. It is said that they claim Oklahoma as their home state. Fowler told the arresting officers last night that he had been married to the woman only about three years and that the children were her's by a former marriage.

FIGHTS FOR LIFE WITH CHAUFFEUR

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 18.—In a hand-to-hand fight between a crazed chauffeur, armed with an axe, in the garage of his residence today, Chas. G. Guth, former president of a chocolate company, shot and mortally wounded his assailant.

The negro, George Murphy, died in the patrol wagon on the way to a hospital.

UTAH PEACHES ARE POPULAR IN EAST

Utah peaches are receiving more than usual notice from the eastern market this year. Secretary W. H. Homer of the Utah Fruit Growers association has received many letters from eastern buyers commending the fruit from this state, and although the markets have for the last three or four weeks been flooded with peaches from various sections of the country, Utah peaches still find ready buyers at prices a little above those of other sections.

Ripe peaches on the Omaha market yesterday brought 5 1/2 cents per crate, and firm better grade fruit brought 60 cents. This is equal to a net price of 25 cents per box f. o. b. cars in this state.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of Sulphur Hair Remedy, which Mother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance. INVALID IS RESCUED

Midvale, Sept. 18.—Discovering the blaze here passing the house on Center street at 2 o'clock this morning, Assistant Chief Thomas Smith of the Midvale fire department, broke down a door of the residence and carried to safety James Pearson, owner of the place and an invalid for more than a year. The Midvale department promptly responded and succeeded in saving the furniture, but the house was totally destroyed. The loss is estimated at $500, fully covered by insurance.

A defective fuse is believed to have permitted the place to get a start in the roof, where it was first noted by the passing fireman.

TRANSPORT STRIKES A TERRIFIC CYCLONE

San Francisco, Sept. 19.—Victor of a terrific battle with a cyclonic storm, during which the vessel was badly battered and the passengers believed so thoroughly that the vessel would not survive the fight that they rushed from their staterooms and donated life preservers to be ready for any emergency, the United States Army transport Logan, Captain C. F. Williams, master, pulled into the transport docks at Fort Mason yesterday morning with almost a capacity passenger list.

One fatality marked the voyage of the big white troopship. On August 25th, eight days after the Logan left Manila, Captain George H. Pierce, who for the last year has been master of the transport Dix, passed away on the Logan. While the Dix was at Gloucester, Captain Pierce complained of serious illness and took to his bed. He partially recovered from this attack, but was again taken ill just as the Logan was sailing from Nagasaki, where the Dix also was. It was decided then that the captain should take passage on the Logan; so he went on board that vessel, only to die of an apoplectic stroke shortly thereafter. His body was brought in on the Logan yesterday and his widow was one of the first at the docks on her sad errand.

Passengers on the troopship give great credit to Captain Williams and the officers of the vessel for the manner in which they handled the big craft during the cyclone. It was at 9 o'clock on the evening of September 2 that the storm first broke over the ship. There was a strong north-east wind, vivid lightning from the hours later the wind had become a gale, accompanied by rain squalls and high seas and it was found necessary to have the ship hove to, heading northeast.

It was at 11:45 o'clock that the passengers became frightened, for east and an extremely rough sea. Two the gale had so increased by that time that it showed cyclonic proportions, and the seas began sweeping the decks of the vessel. The cabins on the starboard side of the vessel were swept time after time by the seas, and the occupants of them, including women and little children—and there were many children aboard the boat—began taking refuge in companionways, many of them in scant attire, and then at midnight the wind changed to southeast and the vessel found itself in the very heart of the cyclone.

The ship was wallowing in the trough of the sea and the waves were breaking far above her decks. The wind was blowing with hurricane force and there were terrific rain squalls. The mizzen truck, that supports the aft ends of the aerials for the wireless equipment, was snapped off near its base and all the equipment wires were torn from their sockets, putting the system of communication entirely out of business.
